

Unit title: The Self Concept
Level :3 Credit value : 3

Unit title: Handling and Interpreting Data
Level :3 Credit value : 3

The practical report should be between 2000 and 2500 words long.

TITLE: An observational study to investigate gender differences in touching behaviour and the development of the self concept.

NAME:

DATE:

ASSESSOR:

Learning Outcomes

On completion of this unit on The self concept the learner will be able to:

1. Identify psychological theories that attempt to explain the development of the self.
2. Explain underlying factors that contribute to the development of a sense of self.
3. Identify practical applications of the psychological knowledge gained

Assessment criteria

The learner has achieved the learner outcome because s/he can:	Yes	No	comments
1. Outline and evaluate theories that attempt to explain the development of self.	☺
2. Outline with reference to relevant empirical evidence factors that contribute to the development of self.
3. Apply to everyday life psychological theories of the self

On completion of the Handling and Interpreting Data unit the learner will be able to:

1. Select appropriate data for inclusion.
2. Present information in an appropriate format.
3. Apply a variety of statistical methods.
4. Analyse a variety of statistical results and show an understanding of results.
5. Evaluate the limitations of the statistical techniques applied.
6. Write a report of research and findings.

The Distance Learning Center
ASSESSMENT CRITERIA FOR PRACTICAL REPORT

Assessment criteria

The learner has achieved the learner outcome because s/he can:	Yes	No	comments
1.1 Choose the appropriate data for inclusion, showing evidence of wider reading. 1.2 Give a rationale for data selected.	☺
2.1 Represent information, using a variety of formats in a clear, concise, accurate and in an effective manner.
3.1 Apply a variety of appropriate statistical methods.
4.1 Draw conclusions from results gained, supported by the data.
5.1 Provide a critical analysis of research methods and statistical techniques used.
6.1 Present findings in a report with a detailed layout making appropriate use of bibliography, references and grammar.

Extra Information and comments
